THE SALOON CLOSING.

The Mayor and City Council have ordered the closing of the liquor saloons on Pioneer Day. They have the right to promulgate this order, and it is their duty to exercise official discretion in the matter; but we cannot help calling in question the wisdom and propriety of the action. On general principles, as a standing proposition, it is a good thing to close the saloons on all holidays, and we would favor a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants on public days, when extraordinary crowds are liable to assemble and there is occasion for unusual excitement. But it occurs to us that the Mayor's proclamation at this time is an apparent official recognition of something that we deny exists, and an acknowledgment of a fear that nobody entertains. The proclamation was undoubtedly called forth by the silly talk about the probability of trouble occurring here on the 24th. Now the Mayor and City Council would not like to admit that they fear even the slightest disturbance on the day named; they certainly would not say that they apprehend any trouble that the police would not be able to quell in short order. Then why assume the attitude of saying there is anything in all this sensational talk about a collision more than childish twaddle?

However, we are not going to condemn the Mayor and Council for doing what they believe to be right, especially as their action is on the side of law and order and the strict maintenance of peace. The proclamation in itself is right and proper, and will tend to make Pioneer Day pass more quietly than it otherwise would have done, though it promised to be peaceful and Sabbath-like beyond any holiday that the city has seen lately. The extra precaution may be well enough, for only those would contemplate making trouble and creating a disturbance who would expect to first fortify themselves with whisky, and if they cannot obtain liquor they may retain what little sense they possess, and keep quiet. The only thing to which we object is the seeming official recognition of something that does not exist.

It is evident that Mayor Sharp hasn't a very high regard for the "patriots" who are so anxious to invade Salt Lake on the Twenty-fourth. He orders the saloons closed, and in that way proposes to suppress their "patriotism."

Has the activity of the fee fiends now-a-days anything to do with a desire to take an early excursion into the mountains? It has been suggested that perhaps the present industry is to get money for expenses.

THE fee fiends made wages on Wednesday.

DON'T FORGET IT, the fee fiends must go.

NOT A MILITARY GOVERNMENT.

Much has been said lately about what the soldiers should do in case of a popular disturbance in this city. Gen. McCook has been blamed by some for not ordering the troops into town on the Fourth, and there is chattering in certain odorous and odious quarters that the President issued an order to the commander of the department, the other day, to hold troops in readiness to march into Salt Lake, on Pioneer Day. People who wanted the soldiers brought down on the Fourth, and those who imagine that the army can be marched into Salt Lake as a matter of course, do not understand the theory of the government and are entirely ignorant of the powers and duties of the military. Gen. McCook has no more right to march his regiment into Salt Lake to awe the people into submission or even to quell a riot than he has to take his soldiers into Mexico or Canada, and should he undertake to do so he would undoubtedly be promptly removed from his command, tried and severely punished. We doubt if the Mayor and City Council were to appeal to the General for troops to quell a disturbance that the municipal police were unable to quell, he could respond to the call without laying himself personally and officially liable to prosecution. The army has no more authority over the hanging of the flag by private citizens or civil officials, than it has over the swinging of hammocks or the clearing of water ditches. It is possible that under certain circumstances and in view of certain representations, the army might be employed to protect United States property which the civil power could not guard, but even then the exercise of authority would be jealously guarded and restricted to narrow limits.

So far the civil authority of Salt Lake has been sufficient, and we never expect the time to come when the municipality will be unable to maintain law and order. Should the occasion for the interference of the military ever arise, the call will be made by the law and order portion of the community, and not by the adventurers and irresponsible.

This is a civil and not a military government; the soldier idea is one of the smallest in the nation, and is yearly growing less, as we see the evils of large standing armies in the old world, and observe how badly governed are the nations in which the military dominates. When Americans have to place an army over themselves to keep them in subjection and enforce the laws, it will be when Americans have lost their patriotism, their self-respect, their manhood and their intelligence, and until such time arrives the less people talk about calling out soldiers on occasions like the late Fourth in this city, the less will they display their ignorance of the laws and theories of the United States government.

If the fee fiends can hold on until the arrival of the next circus they will be happy. Their ability will then find an opportunity in driving tent pins, and the circus proprietor pays the railway fares of his employees.

WE HAVE said all along that it was whiskey patriotism that manifested itself so conspicuously on the Fourth, and adopting that view of it the Mayor proposes to shut off the ebullition on the Twenty-fourth.

IT'S NORTH pole weather when the fee fiends can't charge from $10 to $100 a day against the government.

HOW MANY items of the fee fiends' accounts has the Chief Justice ever examined?

IMPOSED UPON.

The Philadelphia Times, in an editorial on "the alleged Mormon rebellion," very properly avails the idea that the Mormons "contemplate armed rebellion against the authority of the general government," and says: "If it is true that General Howard anticipates anything of this nature it will be looked upon as an indication that he has been imposed upon by somebody." The case is here correctly stated. General Howard has been imposed upon, but whether willingly or against his desires in the premises has not yet appeared. In either case he is responsible for grossly slandering the people of Utah in saying to the President that they were liable to engage in a riot, calling for the interference of troops. That General Howard has been imposed upon we can confidently believe; but a man in his position ought not to be imposed upon and deceived, when it is so easy for him to obtain the facts. When the general was here if he had asked any intelligent person in a position to know the truth, he would have learned that the probability of a collision between Mormons and Gentiles on Pioneer Day was out of the question, and that the talk about such a catastrophe was all by reckless, irresponsible fellows, whose influence does not extend beyond low bar-rooms. General Howard did not want to know that a collision calling for the interference of troops was next to an impossibility. The General is recognized in the army and out as a good deal of a crank, and just such a person as would encourage the idea that the Mormons were on the point of rebellion.

A NON-MORMON in the east who is thoroughly familiar with the situation in Utah, on reading that on the representation of General Howard the President had ordered that troops be held in readiness to pounce down upon Salt Lake, wrote as follows to the writer of this: "You ought to give General Howard a good shaking. Is he crazy? or is he an old fool? The idea of the Mormons having trouble on the 24th is so absurd that I cannot think any sane man will give credence to the preposterous suggestion. The President ought to sit down on Howard when he learns how the old crank has imposed on him." Intelligent, fair-minded people, at all acquainted with the Utah community all feel as the gentleman who sends the above writes.

Major Maitland Wins.

LONDON, July 22.—The peerage case has been decided by the House of Lords in favor of Major Maitland. There were two claimants to the peerage, Major Maitland and Sir James Maitland. Major Maitland contended that he was the heir of the fourth son of the sixth Earl of Lauderdale, who married Mary MacAdam in New York in 1772. Two days before his death, Mary MacAdam had borne three sons to this fourth son of the sixth earl, and the petitioner held that this marriage legitimated the offspring. Sir James Maitland, a descendant of the fifth son of the sixth Earl of Lauderdale, contested the claim of Major Maitland. In the hearing before the House of Lords, United States Minister Phelps, Senator Edmunds and Messrs. Fowler, Stephen, Nash and Clarence Cary gave testimony concerning the law of marriage as it existed in American colonies in 1772.
